

Chapter I. Introduction: Political Rationality and the Uncovering of Culturally Inherited Premises . . . 1

1. An Overview of the Book: A Chicken-and-Egg Problem 1
2. A Utilitarian Definition of Political Rationality 19
3. The Immorality of Political Rationality: Is Political Rationality Compatible with Utopianism? 24
4. Other Sources of Disagreement about the Nature of Political Rationality 31
5. Disagreeing about Disagreement: Rationalism, the GMWER, Relativistic Historicism, and Neo-Hegelianism 33
6. "Philosophical Empiricism" as the Foundation of the Neo-Hegelian Platform: Freedom and the Certainty of Uncertainty 45
7. A Political Philosophy Built on Weberian Sociology and the Concept of Discourse 57
8. Rationalistic Chinese Objections to This Neo-Hegelian, Weberian Concept of Political Philosophy: Gao Rui-quan's Concept of "China's Modern Spiritual-Cultural Tradition" 75
 - 8a. Gao's Contrast between Modern China's Vision of Progress and the "Feudalistic" Confucian Tradition 78
 - 8b. Gao's Rationalism and the Importance of His Insight 87
 - 8c. Some Problems Regarding Logicality, the Meaning of

- “Tradition,” Empirical Evidence, Theoretical Considerations, and Obvious Continuities 91
- 8d. Similarities: The Modern Chinese Idea of Progress as a Goal Partly Resembling Confucian Ideas 96
- 8e. “Old Wine in New Bottles”: The Problem of the Balance between Gemeinschaft and Gesellschaft, between Vertical and Horizontal Social Organization 112
 - 8e1. Epistemological Optimism and the Power to Control the Cosmos 116
 - 8e2. Minimizing the Ills of Egoism as a Goal and Ontological Continuity as a Given 124
 - 8e3. Two Tradition-rooted Premises Defining the Given World 132
- 9. Two Contemporary, Tradition-rooted Paradigms of the Good Society in Critical Perspective 142
- 10. Thinking “Outside the Box”? Feng You-lan and the Four Premises 160
- Endnotes 193

Chapter II. The Problem of Factual and Normative Continuity with the Confucian Tradition in Modern Chinese Thought [paper delivered at the fiftieth anniversary conference of Harvard University’s Fairbank Center, December 9–11, 2005] 225

- 1. The Challenge to the Original Fairbankian Paradigm 225
- 2. Factual Continuity with the Tradition in Modern Chinese Thought and the Problem of Context 230
- 3. The Problem of Normative Continuity 243
 - a. The Urgency of the Normative Issue 243
 - b. Paideia and the Importance of the Normative Issue 244
 - c. Epistemic Smugness 245
 - d. Zhang Zhi-dong’s Perspective as an “Effective Surviving Rival to Western Political Theory” 246
 - e. Adjudicating Rival Claims about the Problem of Normative Continuity: The Burkean Option 248

f.	Beyond the Burkean Option: The Epistemological Problem of the Trustworthiness of History Relative to Critical Reflexivity	249
g.	Beyond the Burkean Option: Agreeing with Some of the GMWER	252
h.	The Neo-Hegelian View Growing out of the GMWER Debates	254
i.	Beyond the GMWER: Jin Yue-lin's Insight	256
j.	Returning to a World of Reflection Put out of Bounds by the GMWER	261
k.	Conclusion: Rethinking Normative Continuity	265
	Endnotes	268

Chapter III.	Selfhood and Authority in Neo-Confucian Political Culture [with the kind consent of the publisher, republication of Metzger article in Arthur Kleinman, Tsung-yi Lin, eds., Normal and Abnormal Behavior in Chinese Culture (Dordrecht, Boston, London: D. Reidel Publishing Company, 1981), pp. 7-27]	275
1.	Autonomy and the Literature on Chinese Political Culture	275
2.	Methodological Considerations	278
3.	Self and Cosmos in Neo-Confucianism	281
4.	Conclusion: The Question of Continuity	292
	References	300

Chapter IV.	Confucian Thought and the Modern Chinese Quest for Moral Autonomy [with the kind consent of the publisher, republication of article in Ren-wen ji she-hui ke-xue ji-kan (Journal of Social Sciences and Philosophy), 1:1 (November 1988), pp. 297-358. Also published as "Das konfuzianische Denken und das Streben nach moralischer Autonomie im China der Neuzeit," in Silke Krieger, Rolf Trauzettel, eds., Konfucianismus und die Modernisierung Chinas (v. Hase & Koehler Verlag, Mainz, 1990), pp. 307-356. Another English version in Silke Krieger, Rolf Trauzettel, eds., Confucianism and the Modernization of China (v. Hase and
-------------	--

1.	The Problem	305
2.	Unpacking the Confucian Concept of Hierarchy and Authority	319
3.	Reflections about the Confucian Concept of Hierarchy and Authority	330
4.	The Problem of Optimistic This-worldliness	335
5.	Conclusion	337
	Endnotes	342
	References	343

Chapter V. Interpreting the Hermeneutic Turn: A “Neo-Hegelian” Critique of Hans-Georg Gadamer’s Hermeneutic Philosophy and of Liu Xiao-gan’s Critique of It 347

1.	Four Versions of the Hermeneutic Turn: The Overarching Philosophical Problem of Freedom and Utility	347
2.	The Hermeneutic Turn as Philosophy	356
3.	Gadamer’s Phenomenological, Dialectical Rejection of the Ontological Separateness of Subject and Object	360
4.	Gadamer’s Derivation of the Direction of History and the Quest for Enlightenment from Ontological Truth	367
5.	Critiquing Gadamer	372
6.	Liu’s View of the Purpose of Hermeneutic Philosophy in China	385
7.	The Strengths of Gadamer’s Approach in Liu’s Eyes	393
8.	Liu’s Objections to Gadamer’s Approach and the “Neo-Hegelian” Objections to His Objections	394
9.	The Hermeneutic Turn in Critical Perspective	421
10.	Some Afterthoughts about Mou Zong-san’s Concept of “Thinking Going against the Grain of Common Sense (ni-jue)”	431
	Endnotes	438

Chapter VI. Mou Zong-san and the Four Premises: Putting His Political Philosophy into Critical Perspective... 445

1. Introduction: The Philosophical Importance of Culturally Inherited Premises 445
2. Fallacies Perceived by Mou 450
3. Dark Thoughts 456
4. Identifying the Good Aspects of "Chinese Culture" and "Western Culture" 457
5. "Dialectically" Synthesizing the Different "Manifestations of Reason" 465
6. Defining Humanity's Given World as Made up of "Reason," "History," and "Cultures" 471
7. "Making History Real" 478
8. Conclusion: The "Neo-Hegelian" Path Back to Foundational Reflections and the Intercultural Agora 488
- Endnotes 504

Chapter VII. How Serious Is the Divergence between Western Liberalism and the Political Logic of Chinese Civilization? A Critique of Stephen C. Angle's Human Rights and Chinese Thought: A Cross-Cultural Inquiry [a republication of Metzger's piece in China Review International, 14:1, spring 2007, pp. 1–19, with the kind consent of the latter's editor] 509

1. The Divergence between Leading Chinese and Western Political Orientations 509
2. Angle's Approach 511
3. Contextual Issues Widening the Divergence between Chinese and Western Thought about Rights 514
4. Theoretical Considerations about Context 519
5. Historiographical Issues 526
- Endnotes 531

Chapter VIII.	The Contemporary Predicament of Political Philosophy East and West: The Epistemological Implications of Culture [a slightly revised version of Metzger's article in Cheng Chung-yi (Zheng Zong-yi), ed., Xiang-gang Zhong-wen Da-xue-de dang-dai ru-zhe (Contemporary Confucians of The Chinese University of Hong Kong; Hong Kong: New Asia College, The Chinese University of Hong Kong, 2006), pp. 17–102, republished with the kind consent of New Asia College]	535
---------------	---	-----

1. Introduction: Defining Political Philosophy and Criteria for Evaluating Political Philosophies East and West 535
2. The Great Modern Western Epistemological Revolution (GMWER) and the Concept of Culture 543
 - a. The Early Development of the GMWER 543
 - b. The Early Development of the Concept of Culture 546
 - c. Culture as Discourse 547
 - d. The Schopenhauer Factor and the Problem of the Transcultural Platform 548
3. Linguistic Practice, Critical Reflexivity (CR), and the Rediscovery of Knowledge 550
 - a. The Question of Relativistic Historicism and the Rediscovery of Knowledge 550
 - b. Linguistic Practice and the Rediscovery of Knowledge 554
 - c. CR as an Aspect of Linguistic Practice 555
 - d. CR and Knowledge about Moral-Political Norms 559
 - e. The Philosophical Exercise Implied by the Nature of Discourse 562
4. Philosophy East and West and the Concepts of Culture and Knowledge: The Problem of the Transcultural Platform 566
 - a. The Spectrum of Western Philosophical Responses to the Problem of Culture 566
 - b. The Spectrum of Chinese Philosophical Responses to

5. Conclusion: Culture as a Metacultural Category 593

Endnotes 600

Chapter IX. Limited Distrust of Reason as a Prerequisite of Cultural Convergence: Weighing Professor Lao Sze-kwang's Concept of the Divergence between "The Confucian Intellectual Tradition" and "Modern Culture" [with the kind consent of the publisher, republication of Metzger's article in Zhong-guo zhe-xue yu wen-hua, vol. 3, November 2008, pp. 22-75] 609

1. Diverging Definitions of Cultural Divergence 609
 2. Lao Sze-kwang's Analysis of Divergence 613
 3. Agreeing with Lao's Approach 619
 4. Questions about Lao's Analysis: Limited Distrust of Reason as the Basis of Convergence 623
 5. Caution in Examining Knowledge Claims 626
 6. The Question of Knowledge about Moral-Political Praxis 631
 7. The Moral-Political Implications of Empiricism and the Question of Empiricism as Knowledge 635
 - a. Semantic Patterns Revealed by Empiricism 636
 - b. A Metaphysical Realm Revealed by Semantic Analysis 641
 - c. Substantive, Metaphysically-Grounded Moral-Political Norms 644
 - d. Refinding the Path toward Knowledge 648
 8. Conclusion: Convergence as a Painful Philosophical Exercise in a Multicultural World 651
- Endnotes 661

Chapter X. In Defense of Political Philosophy: Responding to Some Recent Remarks by Professor Donald J. Munro [with the kind consent of the publisher, republication of Metzger's article in Zhong-guo zhe-xue yu wen-

Endnotes 680

- Chapter XI. The Cunning of Unreason in the Ivory Tower as well as the Marble Citadel: A Review of John Dunn's Setting the People Free: The Story of Democracy. . . 683

Endnotes 705

- Chapter XII. Overdosing on Iconoclasm: A Review of Sam Harris, The End of Faith: Religion, Terror, and the Future of Reason 707

Endnote 715

- Chapter XIII. Rethinking U.S.-Chinese Relations (2007)
[based on a February 12, 2007 talk at Hoover Institution to a delegation organized by the International Visitor Leadership Program, which is sponsored by the U.S. Department of State] 717

- Chapter XIV. Understanding the Taiwan Experience: An Historical Perspective (1989) [Co-authored with RAMON H. MYERS. Published in The Pacific Review, 2:4 (1989), pp. 297–311 and republished as No. 133 in the Hoover Institution Reprint Series] 731

History until 1895 732

Japanese Colonialism, 1895–1945 733

Clashing Views of the World, 1945–1949 735

Economic Development under the KMT, 1949–1987 737

Reasons for Taiwan's Economic Success 740

Political Development in Taiwan, 1949–1987 742

Ideological Development in Taiwan, 1949–1987 747

The Taiwan Model of Chinese Modernization 751

A Logical Approach to the "Taiwan Question" 754

Endnotes 756

Chapter XV. Acknowledgments and Advertisements:

A 1994 Self-Appraisal 759

Glossary and Index 775